

Vocation is said to be a “predisposition to undertake a certain kind of work especially a religious career” (American Heritage Dictionary). On Wed., February 6, at 10:30 in the St. Ambrose Conference room, our Mary and Martha Sisterhood invite you to hear from several women from different religious orders, including lay participants in the Dominicans and Carmelites, speak about their vocation. Our speakers will share how they came to realize that they were called to serve God in a special way. We will hear about their work, what is unique to their particular order, whether religious or lay, and how these vocations have enriched their lives and those around them. Some of our guests are also members of the Peace of Christ Parish. We invite you to come and be inspired by this presentation.
